Alchemy & the Secret Teachings of the Fungi Kingdom

This year's Alchemy of Prague invites you into one of the most mysterious and transformational realms of nature—the Fungi Kingdom. Long overlooked in traditional alchemical texts, fungi are now being rediscovered as nature's original alchemists—masters of transmutation, regeneration, and deep ecological intelligence. From ancient Taoist healing traditions to the latest in regenerative design and biotechnology, fungi are showing us how to heal, how to evolve, and how to live in harmony with the unseen networks that sustain life.

These remarkable organisms break down what is decayed and dying, returning it to the earth as rich soil, fertile for rebirth. They facilitate altered states of consciousness, support immunity, detoxify the planet, and are now powering innovations from living fabrics to bio-batteries. They are at once the decomposers of the old and the architects of the future—a living bridge between death and renewal.

In this immersive program, we will explore how fungi exist between worlds: the biological and the mystical, the ancient and the futuristic, the visible and the invisible. Through storytelling, live demonstrations, initiatory experiences, and hands-on lab sessions, you'll rediscover the mycelial web that connects not only ecosystems—but also minds, memories, and mythologies. You will learn how to work with fungi as allies in healing, consciousness, environmental remediation, and planetary stewardship.

Few organisms have experienced a reversal in public perception as dramatic as mushrooms. When Paul Harris first began his journey into plant medicine and Phyto-chemistry, the prevailing belief was that mushrooms held little to no nutritional or medicinal value—and most were to be feared. Today, the world is in the midst of a mushroom renaissance. A search on Google Scholar now reveals over 6.6 million results for fungi-based research, covering everything from cancer therapies to quantum computing.

Mushrooms such as Reishi, Chaga, and Lion's Mane are now known for their powerful properties—anti-cancer and anti-tumour compounds, blood sugar regulation, neurogenesis support, improved memory and cognition, immune modulation, and deep adaptogenic nourishment. Ancient civilizations revered these fungi as sacred: in Taoist tradition, Reishi was the “Mushroom of Immortality.” In Siberia, Chaga was consumed as a divine elixir by shamans.

But fungi are no longer just healers—they're innovators. Mycelium is now being used in biotechnology labs across the world to create sustainable packaging, clothing, building materials, carbon-neutral batteries, and even interfaces for robotics and sound. Paul Harris will demonstrate a number of these cutting-edge myco-technologies, including fungi that can clean toxic environments, generate power, and act as living computing systems.

Despite their profound capacities, fungi remain largely absent from traditional alchemical literature. Unlike herbs and metals, they have rarely been exalted in the classical canon. This workshop seeks to change that. Paul will employ various alchemical methods to transform fungi into potent, high-frequency medicines. Participants will learn techniques to increase their energetic potency and elevate their medicinal and spiritual value. You'll leave not just with products, but with rare knowledge and practical tools for working with fungi in a truly alchemical way—creating healing solutions that stand apart in a crowded field of wellness offerings.

This workshop also invites you into the rich mystical and shamanic traditions of the Fungi Kingdom. Across time and cultures, mushrooms have been used as sacred sacraments—doorways to the divine. From the mushroom stones of the Mayans to the flying reindeer of the Siberian shamans, the fungal world has long been a carrier of visionary experience and expanded perception. Together, we will explore these traditions as part of a deeper understanding of humanity's conscious evolution.

Led by master alchemist Paul Harris, this two-day course begins with a special introduction evening at the Donkey and Cradle. Over the following days, you will enter into a living lab of transformation.

Set up your own alchemical workstation—complete with beakers, vials, tinctures, and fire—and learn the traditional art of spagyrics:

the separation, purification, and recombination of substances to reveal their hidden life force.

From here, we go deeper into the mysteries of the Philosopher's Stone, planetary correspondences, sacred geometry, and the transformation of both metals and the soul.

You'll learn how to make herbal and fungal tinctures, extract active compounds, and understand how alchemical principles mirror the workings of consciousness. With references drawn from Paracelsus, John Dee, Edward Kelley, Tycho Brahe, and Isaac Newton, Paul will guide you through the forgotten roots of Western alchemy, Taoist inner alchemy, and emerging frontiers in quantum bio-spirituality.

You'll bottle your own mushroom elixir, make a mushroom tincture, and explore how to work with fungi technologies. Learn powerful concepts such as the elements of mercury, gold, and Ormus. You'll see how the seemingly mythical practices of the alchemists were both physical and spiritual—a sacred science of transmutation that applies as much to the soul as to matter.

This event is not just a workshop—it's a portal. A doorway into the forgotten art of transformation. It's about crafting remedies, but also about becoming one. You will leave not only with powerful products, but with a new relationship to fungi, to alchemy, and to yourself.

The Doorway to Advanced Energy Systems

From Ancient Alchemy to Future Science — The Transmutation of Elements

Sponsored by Breakthru-T

Step into a realm where the boundary between ancient wisdom and frontier science dissolves.

The Doorway to Advanced Energy Systems is more than a workshop—it is a living synthesis of alchemy, sacred geometry, modern physics, and sustainable innovation. Sponsored by Breakthru-T, this immersive experience brings together a team of pioneers including Bob Greenyer, Paul Harris, Dr. Jan Rak and Roger Green, along with special guests, for a deep dive into the science of transformation.

Breakthru-T is a visionary initiative dedicated to developing technologies that are carbon-neutral, sustainable, affordable, and aligned with community well-being. Over the years, the initiative has grown into an international platform, showcasing revolutionary ideas at global conferences and cultivating a loyal network of scientists, healers, and innovators. This event continues that tradition—offering a unique blend of presentations, live experiments, and hands-on exploration.

We will present compelling visual evidence and experimental data from real-world tests—demonstrating technologies with the potential to revolutionize everything from energy production to environmental clean-up. You'll witness apparatus and techniques that point toward the ability to synthesize new elements, neutralize radioactive waste, and drastically improve the efficiency and cleanliness of internal combustion engines. These are not theories in isolation—they are emerging realities grounded in years of disciplined inquiry and research.

Bob, Paul and Jan will guide us through foundational theories underpinning these discoveries, including the fractal toroidal electrodynamic structures that support new models of Low Energy Nuclear Reactions (LENR), also known as cold fusion. His deep understanding of micro-ball lightning and Exotic Vacuum Objects (EVOs)—tiny energetic plasmoids—provides the framework for predicting nuclear transmutation events in practical experiments. These insights will culminate in real-time demonstrations of transmutation via cavitation and electrical discharge in water, using materials such as aluminium foil and tungsten. The implications are staggering: what once seemed like science fiction is now observable and reproducible.

In the practical workshop, participants will observe a step-by-step method for using a Scanning Electron Microscope (SEM) paired with Energy Dispersive Spectroscopy (EDS) to analyse material samples. This process allows us to map the elemental makeup of raw materials, document active reaction zones during LENR, and confirm the presence of newly synthesized elements. This is hands-on, cutting-edge research you won't find anywhere else—delivered in an accessible, collaborative format.

We refer to this work as Future Alchemy—a new era where the spiritual principles of ancient traditions meet the empirical rigor of modern science. You will take part in simple yet profound experiments that demonstrate the hidden patterns and harmonics of nature. These explorations draw on sacred geometry, golden ratio dynamics, and the energetic templates used by civilizations such as the Egyptians, Greeks, and Vedic seers. The alchemical axiom “as above, so below” comes to life as we explore energy systems grounded in resonance, implosion, and negentropy.

Throughout the event, we will explore a constellation of transformative technologies:

- Theraphi, a plasma-based healing system rooted in phase conjugation and negative entropy, will be demonstrated by its inventor Paul Harris. Theraphi uses bio-active fields to regenerate cellular structures and has shown promise in reversing degeneration, enhancing vitality, and promoting anti-aging.
- TESLATRON, inspired by Nikola Tesla, harnesses pulsed high-voltage EMF to produce rich fields of negative ions—invigorating the body's biofield and enhancing clarity, focus, and cellular function.
- Thunderstorm Technology and THOR systems, developed through years of experimentation, offer new methods of waste-to-energy conversion, implosion-based fuel enhancement, and low-emission energy production.

More information and booking: info@Breakthru-Technologies.com

These systems represent the rebirth of alchemical principles—no longer hidden in dusty manuscripts but re-emerging through the lens of quantum mechanics, plasma physics, and fractal mathematics. Together, they reveal that alchemy was never merely symbolic—it was the language of a deeper science, now coming into view.

You'll also delve into broader implications of this work: the hidden energy within matter, the nature of ball lightning and coherent charge collapse, and the cosmological insights offered by sacred geometry. These explorations serve not only to advance sustainable technology but to challenge and expand our understanding of consciousness, healing, and humanity's place in the universe.

One of the most promising and controversial areas we'll explore is Low Energy Nuclear Reactions, or cold fusion—a process long dismissed by mainstream science but now resurging in labs around the world. Bob Greenyer, a central figure in the Martin Fleischmann Memorial Project, will share updates on global LENR research and his own experiments. From isotope shifts to novel elemental synthesis, you will witness how ancient alchemical concepts of transmutation are once again becoming the focus of contemporary energy science.

Prague: The Golden City of Alchemy and Mystery

Five centuries ago, Prague was known as Die Goldene Stadt - "The Golden City"- and the name, like its radiant beauty, has endured through the ages. Revered as the crossroads of the medieval world, Prague cast a spell over Europe that drew poets, peasants, artists, architects, inventors, mystics, and alchemists into its orbit. With its towering castle, gilded spires, and churches shimmering with gold, the city exudes a mystical, otherworldly presence that few places on Earth can rival.

This enchanted setting is the perfect backdrop for our alchemical journey. Here, in a city that once buzzed with the ambitions of kings and the experiments of magicians, Aurelius Electrum (Paul Harris of Canada)—one of the world's leading alchemical teachers—will guide participants through the ancient and emerging arts of transformation.

Our primary venue is none other than the Edward Kelley Tower and the nearby Donkey and Cradle, legendary sites where John Dee and Edward Kelley conducted their alchemical experiments in the late 16th century. To learn alchemy in these very spaces—so steeped in Hermetic drama, history, and power—is a rare and potent privilege.

Prague itself is a living alchemical manuscript. Built with paramagnetic stone, aligned with sacred geometry, and woven together by winding cobblestone streets, the city is not just beautiful—it vibrates with a forgotten intelligence. The architecture speaks in proportions and harmonics. The atmosphere whispers secrets. Every corner invites revelation.

Immersing yourself here is more than travel—it's a return to a deeper understanding of reality. With the camaraderie of fellow seekers, the joy of deep learning, and the simple pleasures of Prague's vibrant culture (including, yes, some of the finest beer in the world), this experience promises to be beautiful, transformative, and truly unforgettable.

To learn Alchemy in these very spaces- so steeped in Hermetic drama, history and power- is a rare and potent privilege.

Krivoklát Forest & Castle: A Fungal Field Trip into History and Mystery

Join us for a magical fungi foray into one of the last untouched forest sanctuaries in Europe. The ancient woodlands surrounding Krivoklát Castle, just 60 km west of Prague, have never been exploited for industrial timber production—preserving a pristine abundance of flora, fauna, and folklore.

Once a royal hunting ground dating back to the 11th century, these forests are now famed among Czech mushroom hunters as one of the best spots for foraging wild fungi. As we wander under towering canopies, we'll explore sacred sites—some prehistoric, others believed to be powerful energetic nodes.

The crown jewel of our journey is Krivoklát Castle, a majestic structure that has stood since the 11th century. It served kings and emperors not only as a hunting lodge, but also as a prison. Among its most infamous prisoners: Charles IV, King of Bohemia and Holy Roman Emperor, and Edward Kelley, the alchemist and associate of John Dee. Kelley famously lost his leg attempting to escape its fortified walls—something you'll understand first hand when we explore the castle's formidable defences.

Prepare for a day where nature, alchemy, ritual and legend intertwine.

River Cruise: An Evening of Music, Magic and Moonlight

On our second-to-last night in Prague, we invite you to unwind in style with a special evening river cruise along the Vltava. As the city's spires and bridges glow under the moonlight, you'll enjoy delicious food, live jazz, and the warm company of your fellow alchemical adventurers. Floating past Prague's most iconic landmarks—bathed in golden light and reflected in the water's surface—you'll experience the city's surreal, dreamlike beauty from an entirely new perspective.

It's a night of connection, celebration, and enchantment—the perfect close to an unforgettable journey.

He has created several wellness devices over the last 30+ years and is currently developing a biological manufacturing facility, which incorporates all of these technologies to create a showcase model for going beyond sustainable agriculture.

It will provide food, natural medicine as well as produce energy from local waste products, incorporating several closed loop systems.

Paul is known for his presentations on various topics including creating Bioactive Fields with Plasma, Practical Alchemy, Bio-hacking, the Teslatron, Water and various other Exotic Technologies.

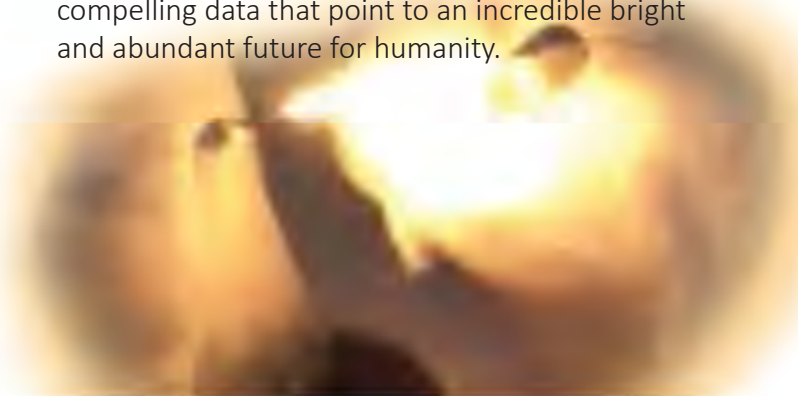

Bob Greenyer is an engineer and researcher specializing in Cold Fusion, also known as Low-Energy Nuclear Reactions (LENR). He has presented at numerous technology conferences worldwide and holds a Bachelor of Engineering in Manufacturing Engineering from Brunel University in London, UK. Bob is a clean energy researcher and the founder and leader of the Martin Fleischmann Memorial Project. He is actively involved in several advanced energy systems globally and often participates in testing and validating technologies entering the marketplace.

Bob cut his teeth in the pharmaceutical, advertising and banking industry and ran an animation and graphic design company for two decades. Looking for new challenges he quit his consultancy work and animation business to explore challenging research in what is known as Low Energy Nuclear Reactions.

Since 2012, Bob has been volunteering for the Martin Fleischmann Memorial Project, that he co-founded. He has worked with leading researchers in the field all over the world, aggregating and interpreting varied data sets, publishing as he went along. Since 2015 he took a different approach to the field and started looking at the message nature was sending and it led him to a startling conclusion.

It appears that nature is driven by a simple fractal toroidal form whose basis is sacred geometry and that appears to explain advanced technologies and alchemical imagery alike. In recent years he has, with his friend and colleague Alan Goldwater, developed experiments that are simple and established compelling data that point to an incredible bright and abundant future for humanity.
